Today is Long Café
Sai Ying Pun, Hong Kong, China

Inspired by Australia's dramatic golden sunsets, this bright, vibrant café also borrows an aged grey apartment block—a stark contrast of warmth and color that invites the attention of every passerby. Located in one of Hong Kong Island's oldest districts, Sai Ying Pun, the area was a former fishing port and later a British military base during the colonial era. Today, restaurants, cafés, and shops are opening up rapidly after a government-led regeneration project introduced an era of urban renewal. The name of this airy café, Today is Long, references the plentiful sunlight Australia is blessed with. The color theme reflects both the warm red-orange hues of the long sunset while also paying homage to one of Australia's most famous landmarks: the red and beige sandstone mansions, Chuan, also known as Ayer's Rock. The texture of Chuan's baked earth sandstone is represented by the fired ceramic tiles anchored at the lower part of the facade and in the terracotta color scheme of the interiors, fittings, and service ware. The striking facade of Today is Long depicts different arrangements of curved hemispheres, forming an imposing, geometric step front that distinguishes the café from the surrounding monochromatic busy buildings. One of the hemispheres creates an arched entrance, which forms a short tunnel transporting customers from the hectic and bustling Sai Ying Pun to the quiet and comfortable interior.

A black metal mesh screen bar adds to the view through the space, integrating a series of umbrellas, plants, and retail displays that are highlighted by two parallel rows of lights at the base of the counter creates a seamless transition to the checkered floor.

The walls are covered in laser-cut glass laminate panels, a material key to Vescher's aesthetic. Above, an eight-stepped hemispherical curves around the bathroom block. Two symmetrical barquelets converge at a customer service station backed by a built planter. Curved mirrors, divided by concrete columns, give a sense of spaciousness to the other side light café. Vintage chairs, bound in distressed ash, were embellished with tan leather to match the barquelets. Covering the tables, a mix of five different colored laminates continues the theme of bold colors and angular shapes. Pushing the '70s theme even further, pendant lights fabricated by Lambert & Fils were designed using yellow telephone wire. Bold cubes join together to make a frame for the mirror in the bathroom. Floor-to-ceiling windows in the facade light up the bright colors and contrasting patterns, while displaying the warm and welcoming environment to passersby.

360-Degree Living in a Mediterranean Forest

DELO DEBEO, OFFICE D'ARTISTES DÉCORÉS AND GUSTAVO MATARONA, SPAIN 2017

This extraordinary holiday home is the second in a series of residential dwellings, or Stela Houses, created by French developer Christian Isselstein, who commissioned a group of leading architects for each of the 15 projects. Located in Matarona, a region cherished for its mountain forests, this ring-shaped house stands as an ideal example of a nature-oriented dwelling, one that embodies the best features of both modernism and traditionalism. The design is by OFFICE D'ARTISTES DÉCORÉS founder Gustavo Matarona. In collaboration with architect Gert David Van Severen focused on connecting these two seemingly postmodernist shapes to those found in the surrounding landscape. Behind the peculiarly shaped, single-level structure (with ample garden space at the ring's center) lies the concept of the position, beloved by 20th-century modernism: to abolish the boundaries between inside and outside, and the house has the feeling of both indoors and outdoors. Designed to exist entirely off-grid, the house employs solar panels for heating and electricity, roof tanks for rainwater collection, and a filtration system to purify the water. Sustainability was the intent as to its core, reflected by every possible natural resource: recycled bathroom cabinetry, a sustainable wood door. Metal and concrete textures are highlighted by pieces from Belgian studio Studio Van Severen and French-based artist Richard Voulet. But in the end, this complex synthesis of art, architecture, and design is united by one purpose: to offer its inhabitants a singular sensory experience as the magnificent forest of Matarona.

AN EVOLVING ARTWORK BEYOND THE GALLERY

When Hauser and Wirth opened a gallery at Dursdale Farm in rural Somerset, it seemed only fitting that Piet Oudolf—the master of sculptural, painterly planting—was asked to be involved.

Eponymously named, Oudolf Field is an ever-evolving masterpiece, and the largest of three gardens that surround the gallery space. The two smaller gardens are more subtle and contained in their language, leaving space to respond to the buildings. The Cluster Garden is aptly named, forming more of a meditative space. The planting—so rich in mixed greens and textures, featuring grasses and perennials—flows around the form of a Louis Brongniart spire and gently moves in an endless dance with an Alexander Calder piece. Away from this, you are drawn to the explosion of planting that lies in the neighboring field. This is known as Oudolf's signature work: grasses and perennials play out a performance throughout the year, demonstrating Oudolf's well-known belief that the garden should hold as much interest in winter as in summer. The beautiful seed heads and skeletal remains of the plants in winter provide a stark contrast to the colorful drifts and sweeping grasses of high summer. This is a garden free from the pressure of being the "best" at any one time. There is not a single prescriptive route through the garden. There are multiple options, and many sleeping and winding paths. This means the viewer is free to explore and experience the meadow from as many angles as they choose. Indeed, it positively encourages you to take in as many of the dynamic planting compositions as possible, which deliver constantly shifting perspectives on the garden. Potential is lying around every turn. This garden is also a reminder that as an artwork, a garden is never truly the work of one person. Oudolf's composition is undeniably masterful, but how this space evolves is very much rooted in how the plants respond to conditions and seasons. This is a living, changing environment, and it reminds us that there is a huge element of being in a garden. We can control things to a certain extent, but there is much joy to be found in the unexpected results of time.

CONCRETE JUNGLE

Tropical Architecture and its Surprising Origins

Editor: gestalten
Features: Full color, hardcover,
linen quarter-binding, stitch bound,
304 pages, 24.5 x 33 cm, 9 3/4 x 13 inches
Price: € 60 (D) £ 55 $ 90 (US)
ISBN: 978-3-96704-089-0

Concrete Jungle presents some of the most exciting tropical houses and tells the surprising story of lush modernist architecture.

The liaison of rational architecture with the organic lushness of tropical vegetation has created some of the most visionary and futuristic buildings we know. Here, nature tames and bends the rough materials and austere lines, becoming one with the architecture.

Based on the concepts of modernist style and Bauhaus aesthetics, countries in tropical regions like Latin America, Asia, and Africa have developed their own unique visions of an international style and architecture that are both timeless and desirable, and they continue to be highly influential around the globe.

Concrete Jungle embarks on a journey through private works of architects that established the roots of the tropical modernist style and those who carry it on, from iconic visionaries, such as Luis Barragán and Lina Bo Bardi, to our contemporary Isay Weinfeld and others.

KING HOUSE

Paulo Mendes da Rocha
São Paulo, Brazil

Above all else, Paulo Mendes da Rocha was devoted to public works projects. He was frequently quoted as saying, "All space is public. The only private space that you can imagine is in the human mind." Yet, the emergence of a military dictatorship in Brazil in the 1960s meant that such work faded into distant memory for over a decade. It is in this context that he became known for his residential masterpieces. In Chácara Flora, a then sparsely populated neighborhood in southern São Paulo, Mendes da Rocha took an approach rooted in both creativity and rationality when designing one of his famed concrete forms for the English expatriate James Francis King. The house, a perfect square built upon eight columns so as not to interfere with the steep incline of the plot, sits above ground level. Rather than extending out toward the dense greenery, it is arranged around a central courtyard. This internal landscaping, reducing the scale and tying nature and daily life together in a more intimate fashion, contrasts with the vast exterior, which blends into its surroundings without dividing walls or fences.

For the interior, Mendes da Rocha set out to eradicate unnecessary intermediary spaces that separate public and private. The bedrooms and bathrooms exist on one side along the facade, all opening directly onto the communal quarters. With the exception of the fireplace, around which domestic life centers, the main living area consists of large, uninterrupted space—simultaneously cozy and expansive—allowing inhabitants to adapt it to their particular needs. The U-shaped plan is connected at the back by a narrow, open-air corridor flanked by the courtyard, the walling produces a reciprocal gaze between those moving through it and those occupying the house. The relationship between differentiated spaces only becomes more deeply intertwined, making this a true Mendes da Rocha creation.

Norm Architects' sense of humane simplicity helps to shape environments that feel just as good as they look.

Guided by the purpose of wellbeing, the essence of Norm Architects' style is balance: richness focused by restraint, simplicity imbued with warmth, complexity heightened by order. Be it architecture, interiors, or furniture, Norm's unique brand of soft minimalism speaks to the mind as much as the body, creating and curating spaces for all.

The first self-curated monograph by Norm Architects, Soft Minimal showcases a range of works which facilitated their establishment as key figures within Nordic design. Presenting residential and commercial projects throughout Scandinavia, Italy and Japan, Norm reflects on Nordic traditions, modernist principles, and the importance of natural materials. Exploring a creative process that makes the visual speak to all senses, the book becomes insightful, inspirational, and deeply poetic.

Situated in one of Copenhagen's oldest streets, NORM ARCHITECTS are deeply embedded in their context and apply their principles in projects worldwide. Their expertise lies in finding that sweet spot between having nothing left to add, or to take away.

"A tactical object, a manifesto, and a sourcebook—all in one—the publication seeks to highlight the values and design principles guiding the Danish practice while providing aesthetic inspiration to those that turn its pages." IGNANT (US)

Famous artists are commenting on politics and raising awareness on issues like authoritarian regimes, sustainability, climate change, diversity and immigration.

Art has always had an intense relationship with activism and politics. It has a unique ability to communicate, persuade, generate controversy, raise awareness, and encourage people to question their preconceptions and beliefs. In these tumultuous times, with democracy being challenged from all sides, and with issues such as climate change, extremism, racism, and gender inequality ever higher on the news agenda, contemporary artists have no lack of inspiration.

The Art of Protest explores the connection between art, politics, and activism today, revealing how, over the past decade, artists have been engaging with political and social issues through mediums ranging from painting to sculpture, from installations to performance, and from photography to digital work. Featuring the work of more than 70 artists and packed with visuals and in-depth commentary, The Art of Protest contextualizes and celebrates art as a tool for political critique and a powerful agent for change.

VIVIEN KOHLER

SOUTH AFRICA

Vivien Kohler is a painter based in Johannesburg, South Africa. Like millions of other South Africans, Kohler has navigated the social geography of a racially turbulent society for entire life. Kohler's work, whether hyperrealistic or her more recent abstract pieces, has always drawn from her surroundings, the realities which make up life in Johannesburg. That is why Kohler's work mostly centers on the themes of migration, marginalization, and displacement in the urban landscape of post-apartheid South Africa. "My aim is to narrate the experience of urban migration in an attempt to create the authentic self," says Kohler. "Whether it is a personal perception of one's circumstances, a generalization thrust upon one by society, or a meeting with one's own self. The critique might seem inescapable, yet in reality, the issue is only skin deep." Kohler constructs and paints on assemblage pieces. Kohler does not seek to hide the realities of unfair perception, but to symbolically represent resilience and strength. "The artist's creative process involves using discarded objects. He transforms these moments into personal diaries, reflecting his financial and political struggles," says Kohler. "The search for home is not always a physical one. My endeavor is to find the home within my own skin." (AG)

These are some of the most beautiful and powerful works of art I have ever seen. My love is long and deep, and I am proud to be a part of it. I hope you all enjoy this book as much as I do. Thank you for your support and for making this book possible. With love, Vivien Kohler

Jupiter Artland

Cutting-edge international artists meet in this garden of delights

The green, rolling meadows surrounding Broomington House just outside Edinburgh hold a secret garden of swimming pools, miniature shops, and diverse sculptures, all in the name of art. Scattered across 800 acres of land around the 18th-century home of art lovers Nicky and Robert Wilson is Jupiter Artland, a sanctuary for unexpected glimmers of art. The park is home to the work of some of the most cutting-edge international artists, including Phyllida Barlow, Christian Boltanski, Helen Chadwick, Ian Hamilton Finlay, Antony Gormley, Anish Kapoor, Tania Kovales, Cornelia Parker, and Joana Vasconcelos.

It is Vasconcelos's swimming pool that greets you as you enter the gardens. Typical for trademark pop art inspired graphics, Gateway is a mural pool lined with rainbow-colored, roughly patterned tiles that create a flower around the water. The tiles were crafted in Portugal, where the artist is from. Just behind the pool and past Call of Life, a sprawling cult-maintained lawn by landscape artist Charles Jencks, is a forest with a flashing and purple chair market hidden among its trees. Get closer and you notice that the shop is upside down. A work of Rachel Macdonald, upside-down mirror image 2 is an abandoned store with the lights standing level of tracks, which is a part of Phyllida Barlow's artwork Quarry. The next time you might miss that entirely and spend the day with Ian Hamilton Finlay's Temple of Apollo, a neoclassical pavilion that pays tribute to Walter Pater's 1868 text Apollon Paganus. There are, however, pieces—such as Andy Goldsworthy's Stone Circle, where large black stones are placed in individual trees that continue to grow around them—that never fail to entertain, visit after visit.

Digital Orca

A cult writer and artist pays tribute to the men who lost their lives in one of the worst industrial accidents in British Columbia's history

On June 17, 1958, 19 men died while constructing the Second Narrows Bridge, which connects Vancouver to the Burrard Inlet. During the building work, a temporary suspension pillar had been incorrectly installed and, unable to withstand the weight, it collapsed, plunging the construction workers into the water where they died instantly. Digital Orca is a tribute to those lost lives. Through his work, the artist Douglas Coupland, also a science-fiction writer, presents his sophisticated perception of how technological industrialization can hurt us. This was famously seen in his 1995 cult classic novel, Generation X: Tales for an Accelerated Culture, in which a group of friends become increasingly disillusioned with their tech jobs. The 8-meter (26-foot) Digital Orca is a towering, intimidating sculpture of an orca, a reminder of Canada's history of killer whale sightings off the western Pacific Ocean coast of Vancouver. This whale, however, looks as though it is leaping out of a computer screen. Known for writing about the perils of global digitization, Coupland wanted to look at the past, present, and the future of Vancouver through a checked and computerized lens. By digitizing the orca, he challenges his audience to consider the loss caused by industrialization—the price of progress, as experienced in the 1950s, or the emotional loss we experience in technology today. In Digital Orca, perhaps Coupland is asking us to consider the line in Generation X: "There's too much weight improperly distributed towers and elevators, steel, stone and cement. So much mass up so high that gravity itself could end up being warped."

SUPERETTE ANNEX

Cannabis products
Toronto, Canada
Opened in 2022

What looks like an Italian deli actually sells something a little bit different: Superette's shelves are filled with cannabis products, ranging from pre-rolled joints and various types of marijuanas to accessories such as bong, rolling papers, ashtrays, and lighters. To match its green-striped awning, the company's in-house design team combined pale green shelving, cannabis-themed prints, and inviting highboards. Bar chairs, lamps, and Superette's logo add red accents.

With two urban university campuses just a few blocks away, Superette Annex, the Canadian label's seventh store, has its biggest target audience nearby. Admission to the store is permitted only if you are 19 or older. So the students can enjoy the interior, buy and smoke cannabis, and also use the store to co-work, study together, and go on relaxed dates. When hanger strikes, the red Marche Phone on the wall can be used to order directly from the Jewish deli next door. Is it an illusion, or did the green of the checkered floor somehow get more vivid just now?

FRAMA STUDIO STORE

Lifestyle
Copenhagen, Denmark
Opened in 2017

Frama deliberately chose this historic pharmacy in the Nyboder district for their Copenhagen Studio Store. Its original, intricately decorated oak cabinets contrast starkly with the brand's diverse contemporary designs who simultaneously evoke the late 19th century. The designers like to draw inspiration from the history of their showroom. Their designs frequently feature referential references to past design eras. Frama designs furniture, kitchens and lighting, books, clothing, and fragrances, as well as complete interiors. The common factors are simple forms, natural materials, and an attitude to life that is located somewhere between permanence and modernity.

With regular events for the creative scene, the Studio Store provides another welcome offering. Since October 2020, the in-house café Apotek 57 has been serving homemade delicacies with—it goes without saying—an emphasis on simplicity, seasonal ingredients, and clean lines.

THE REBEL'S WARDROBE

The Untold Story of Menswear's Renegade Past

Editors: gestalten,
Thomas Stege Bojer & Bryan Szabo
Features: Full color, hardcover,

22.5 x 29 cm, 9 x 11 ½ inches
Price: € 50 (D) £ 45 $ 75 (US)

An entertaining exploration of trend-immune fashion classics and their surprising origins.

How did the plain white T-shirt become an everyday hero? Which movie star helped turn the leather jacket into a global icon? And were chinos really created for military purposes? The origin stories of these casual men's fashion staples will surprise you, often being traced back to subversive counter cultures.

The Rebel's Wardrobe unpacks the modern menswear lexicon and reveals, for example, why the Carhartt jacket designed for railroad workers became synonymous with skaters and graffiti artists, or how polo shirts made the leap from middle-class tennis clubs to British Mods. Traversing genres and styles, this book goes back to the gestation period of iconic pieces, showing how they became timeless classics transcending fashion.

Comprising THOMAS STEGE BOJER and BRYAN SZABO, Denimhunters is one of the internet's premier denim and heritage menswear authorities. It was founded in 2012 by Stege Bojer, who now serves as the editor-in-chief. Experienced writer and editor Szabo is a contributor to the site, and notably spearheads the writing and research for the Well-Made Essentials rugged menswear buying guide.

"If you've ever modeled one of your fits off one of Steve McQueen's timeless looks, wondered how and (more importantly) why the white tee looks eternally badass, or just wanted all the detailed history on your favorite iconic piece of clothing that still holds up from the past—you're gonna want to win this beautifully bound piece of men's fashion literature."

The Cardigan: Knitted Kit for Settled Style

The conservative classic might be linked to fully domesticated masculinity, but it's got a surprising military pedigree.

The cardigan takes its name from James Bradwell, the 7th Earl of Cardigan and lieutenant general in the British Army. Bradwell led the famous Charge of the Light Brigade during the Battle of Balaclava, the 1854 engagement between Russian and British forces that also gave us the knitted socks favored by stick-up-artists. Bradwell made it all the way to the Russian lines and, after briefly engaging with the enemy, turned his horse on its heels and galloped back to the British lines. He lost more than 150 of his 600 men, but the charge became legendary.

When Cardigan returned to London, he was showered with praise for his gallantry. Ballads were composed in his honor, and pictures appeared in London shops showing the general leaping over the Russian battery on horseback. The text woven waistcoat that he had worn in the battle (and possibly designed) became fashionable in London, and people started referring to it as the "cardigan." Within a decade, sleeves were added to the waistcoat—both versions co-existed for a time. At first, the jackets were knit by hand, but with the advancement of knitting technologies, manufacturers were able to start producing cardigans by the 1880s in considerable numbers.

By the early 1900s, the knitted sweaters were popular in most modern wardrobes. Men and women were them while playing golf or running socially. Coco Chanel is often credited with creating the women's cardigan shortly before World War I, but according to textile historian Leimont Oakes, "[Chanel] was merely reproducing what was already a widespread trend." But she did help to further popularize the style, which became an essential item in Western fashion by the end of the 1920s.

As imitations and actors began to ditch the shirt and tie in the '50s, the cardigan assumed a central role in a leisurely yet smart style that paved the way for the widespread relaxation of fashion in the '60s and '70s. Flirty-eyed stars like Paul Newman, Steve McQueen, and Clint Eastwood showed their softer sides by posing in woolly cardigans, and jazz musicians like Grant Green and Eric Dolphy wore

McQueen in a red cardigan (1964). At a meeting in Montreal (1964), a Montreal paper (founded by a group of English-speaking immigrants, including Malcolm X, Salik-Douar and others) was the official paper of the Nation of Islam. The issue here was published three days after McQueen's return to the second time, scoring a TD with the controversial "phantom punch."

Secret Affair in London (1976). When the Harrington took off among its rivals, it was in the '70s. It became one of the backbone pieces of the emerging English style. Each generation takes a unique, evolving road style, and in the late '70s, the Page (front) of Secret Affair led the charge in a 09.

Frankie in a King of the Hill (1976). Young revolutionaries and trendsetters began the look Harrington was creating around 1970. It's an open question whether it adapted to each new scene, or the scenes adapted it.

Dark, Grant Green, and The Beatles' Mink, all of whom pioneered subversive takes on Ivy League style. London youths riffed on the fashion, using American button-down shirts and three-button suits with fish-tail parkas and Italian soccer.

In the mid-1960s, another John Simeon, who catered to successive generations of mod, skater, and modhead, definitely named the jacket when he advertised the English-made 09 at the Rodney Harrington, taking the name from a character on Peyton Place, an American prime-time soap opera. The navy stripe gave the English-made jacket a degree of American cachet, and the English moddies ate it up, opening up outside the UK market by 1967, many of them unaware that the jacket was a domestic product.

Style icons like Steve McQueen and Frank Sinatra added to its glamour, cementing its quintessentially American character. McQueen wore the Harrington on the cover of Life magazine in 1963, which showed him riding a motorcycle with his wife's arms wrapped around his waist. The jacket got another boost in The Thomas Crown Affair (1968), in which McQueen pilots a bright yellow glider in a navy blueacacia 09 with a pair of Prada 714s and a navy blue baseball cap. It's not hard to see why English moddies were hungry for the Harrington.

What is harder to understand is why, for the next four decades, no matter what the dominant style of the moment, the Harrington managed to show its way into every cultural scene. It remained a fixture in both American and English subcultures, worn by everybody from punk and skater to the most serious and Brit pop-enthusiasts—all the while remaining comfortable at the country club, its natural home. There's no denying the Harrington's timeless quality and remarkable versatility.

Style icons like Steve McQueen and Frank Sinatra added to its glamour, cementing its quintessentially American character.

Steve McQueen leans into his Harrington (1964). McQueen looks much like the first in a white Harrington with the collar flipped up for extra casual cool. Paired with a crop-tote shirt and a 1967 truck, the Harrington looks settled and domesticated.

Dick Preddy in King of the Hill (1976). Preddy was scheduled to be inducted into the Army at the beginning of 1966, but he had contracted to make King of the Hill. He wrote the draft board to request a deferment, which was granted. This gave him all the time in the film, knowing that it would be his role and the return from service. With help from Harrington, he got some of the best and most explicit performances of his career.

Welcome to Jaime Hayon's beautiful world: mysterious ceramic creatures, finely crafted objects, and the warm pastel colors of his Mediterranean home.

This title is a compilation of Jaime Hayon's famed work exploring his relationship with materials, his theory of color, his technique, inspiration, and creative process.

Jaime's style and vision have come to be associated with the most prestigious interior design for hotels, restaurants, and galleries. Blurring the lines between art, decoration, and design, Hayon's creations are full of playfulness and optimism. Jaime Hayon is the follow up to gestalten's highly successful book, Works.

Spanish artist and designer, JAIME HAYON founded Hayon Studio in 2001. He has brought his unique vision in contemporary design to the likes of Swarovski, Fritz Hansen, & Tradition, or Baccarat, as well as executing complete interiors for leading hospitality and cultural venues. Based in Valencia, Spain, he has been lauded one of the most influential creators of the last decade and as a "visionary" creative icon by TIME magazine.

"In 2017, he designed the decoration of the Hotel Barceló Torre in Madrid. A major achievement at the meeting between the different disciplines he practices. It is this rich and personal repertoire that the book published by gestalten presents." MILK DECORATION (France)

"The pages show mysterious ceramic creatures, carefully crafted design objects, domestic spaces inspired in colors by his Mediterranean soul, but also important interior design projects conceived for hotels, restaurants, galleries (...)" ELLE DECOR (Italy)

DE TOMASO MANGUSTA

The once and future Cobra killer was Alejandro de Tomaso's mid-engined answer for those about to rock.

“Mangusta” is the Italian word for mongoose, an otherwise cuddly little creature that hunts snakes. Once, Alejandro de Tomaso had been in talks with Carroll Shelby to replace his famed Cobra with a De Tomaso, complete with big Ford V8 power. Instead, Shelby signed with Ford to oversee the GT40 racing program. The mongoose is fearless, capable of throwing its own fury at venomous snakes—including the king cobra. What’s a little friendly rivalry between automotive luminaries?

The formula was familiar: Italian elegance with American firepower. In this case, it was a design by Ghia and an engine by Ford. No less a luminary figure than Giugiaro imbued the Mangusta with its namesake’s menace: heavy-lidded headlights and ludicrously low bodywork, emphasizing those archaic-sounding wheels and tires to cartoonish effect. The Ford V8 was mounted in the middle, underneath the Mangusta’s most dramatic feature, a pair of gull-winged doors that swung over the engine like a pair of arms. The Mangusta was a special Chevrolet-powered Mangusta—he sent the majority of Mangustas to America. A total of 401 Mangustas were built, with the majority

FERRARI 250 GTO SCAGLIETTI

The world's most desirable racing Ferrari, as confirmed by its lofty auction price.

Chassis 104127 was an early 250 GTO, and the 250 GTO was an early Ferrari. On August 20, 2008, the 250 GTO was sold at auction for $11 million. It was the most expensive car ever sold at auction, and it was the most expensive car ever sold at auction. It was the most expensive car ever sold at auction, and it was the most expensive car ever sold at auction.

MASERATI AGGCL 53 PININFARINA BERLINETTA

The AGGCL 53 was a Maserati sports car, with a 2.0-liter V6 engine. It was designed by Pininfarina and built by Maserati. It was the most expensive car ever sold at auction, and it was the most expensive car ever sold at auction.

THE MASERATI THAT WAS ONE IN A MILLION

One of Pininfarina's most incredible designs, wrapped around one of Maserati's most incredible race cars, all four examples of the Maserati AGGCL 53 were ridden hard and put away wet.

It is a phenomenon that runs through all sports: time and again, siblings appear who are world-class in the same profession: the Schumacher brothers in Formula 1, the Williams sisters in tennis, the Sedins and Staals in ice hockey. And, of course, in MotoGP, in the Márquezes and Espargarós we have two pairs of brothers who are rivals on the track but still family the rest of the time. Julià Márquez, Marc and Alex's father, is popular with the cameras at the circuits. He lives the highs and lows with his sons so visibly, it's as if he were riding himself. His face among the Repsol Honda crowd celebrating a victory by Marc shows just how much he has enjoyed the journey that began some 25 years ago with children's races at the local motorcycle club, where he was a track marshal and his wife, Roser, made the sandwiches in the canteen. The relationship between the Márquez parents and their long since adult sons, both world champions, has changed in many ways down the years. But one thing has remained constant: Marc learnt the trust and respect for others that he calls for in his working environment at home in Cervera, Spain, with Roser and Julià, his grandparents, and brother Alex, three years his junior.

218 Curve 8 219 Grin and Bear It

I wanted to please every single fan. You see so many eyes, so many faces, so many hopes, so much enthusiasm. That's what makes turning away and walking on difficult. This isn't an anonymous mass of people. They're all individuals I mean something to. And if these fans could spend one day, just one day, with me during a race weekend, I'm sure they would understand where I'm coming from. And there's another thing. My actual and most important job is to race, to perform. Distractions have an adverse effect, so I have to block the spectators out from a certain point. I hope those fans that didn't manage to get a selfie with me will still be just as enthusiastic in the stands on race day and cheer me on!

So that was the positive side of being popular. The negative side is that I am always under observation. It isn't easy for me, and the fact that the world is full of mobile phones with cameras in them also limits my privacy. When I'm free, I love to party. Who doesn't love a cool party?

The parties we throw after winning a World Championship are always particularly awesome, and the most emotional one was certainly the one after my first MotoGP title in 2013. It was in Valencia, I had won the World Championship, the first rookie to do so since Kenny Roberts, and the youngest winning rider in the history of the premier class too.

Rosel. In the following laps, Lorenzo controlled the pace and tried to keep the group up front as large as possible, the reason being there might then be enough riders between him in the lead and Marc for him to bring the World Championship home. But it didn't go according to plan. The tactic got him tangled up in skidpans with a feisty Dani Pedrosa. Twenty-one laps from the finish, both had to move away from the ideal line at, of all places, again, the Doohan turn. Marc briefly took the lead and then did what you wouldn't normally expect of him: he rode a controlled race, came home in a risk-free third place and thus dethroned Lorenzo in a confidently relaxed manner, or so it seemed to onlookers, at least.

I remember missing gears four or five times on the last lap, which never normally happens to me. I had completely lost my focus and, mentally, I was already celebrating my title. In Formula 1, you can hear what the drivers say on the radio when they cross the finish line and have won the title. We don't have that, but rest assured, you didn't need an on-board radio to hear me screaming with joy under my helmet the way I did that day. People must have heard me all over Spain! And the best was still to come. First I stopped off by the official fan club in the cool-down lap. I threw my gloves into the crowd, someone glued the number 1 over my traditional number 93 to show I was world champion, my original helmet was swapped for one with a special world champion design, and I had a specially designed T-shirt with "Baby Champ on Board" printed on it. Wonderful!

And then came the highlight, at least for me. It was back on the bike and off in the pacific form, where my father was waiting, between the bikes of Lorenzo, who had won the race, and my friend and teammate Pedrosa. It was a very emotional moment. I could finally turn the bike off and at long last collapse into my team's arms! At moments like those I'm a total huffer. I love collapsing into people's arms, feeling hands putting me on the back, jumping up and down in circles together, being picked up and thrown into the air... It's the best feeling in the whole world! I think I floated that afternoon.

The party on the Sunday evening right after that decisive race didn't actually go on very long; those celebrations never really do, as I would learn in subsequent years. After a Grand Prix, you're just too shattered physically. But as for the big World Championship bash in Cervera... That rarely finished before eight or nine o'clock in the morning! Those parties were legendary. The best ever. Ride hard, party hard!

However, I have to warn my parties, because I am very strict. And there are times of the year when there is a total partying ban. And when I do allow myself to get carried away, when I really deserve a little fun, unfortunately I can't usually go for it as much as I would sometimes like to. What's the point of partying in first gear?

That's not who I am, sorry. Sometimes I ask one or two friends to take care of me and pull the plug on proceedings before I do anything crazy and things get completely out of hand. That's a real slower for me, mainly because I have to think carefully in advance about when I can party and not live it up every night until three o'clock in the morning. But in my holidays I like to, just like every other Spaniard of my age.

But I also have to be careful in my day-to-day life and set myself very strict standards, whether on the road, at restaurants, in public. There's always someone watching what I'm doing. However, there is another level still, and that is at racetracks with other motorcyclists close by. There is one scene I will never forget. I was training on a private racetrack on a Honda from my garage. During a break, I had to move the bike a few meters. Without much thought, I got on, started it and rode maybe 20 metres at walking pace to get it out of the way, without putting on a helmet. You can picture what happened next. Not long after,

THE KERRY WAY County Kerry IRELAND

GOOD TO KNOW

START/FINISH
 Killarney, Ireland

TOTAL ELEVATION GAIN
 4,737m (15,543ft)

SEASON
 From October to March the weather can be wet and stormy, with a chance of snow on higher paths. The best months are May to August.

ACCOMMODATIONS
 Discreet stealth camping is practiced by some hikers on remote parts of the route. However, it is not encouraged by landowners. There are only a few official campsites and no mountain huts or refuges. Most hikers will need to make use of hotels, hostels, guesthouses, and B&Bs. There are many options in the towns and villages along the Kerry Way. Book well in advance.

HIGHLIGHTS

1. Tomteastall
2. Maghlynnudly's Reeks
3. The views from Coomshingaun
4. The stone forts at Lusher and Stapege

HELPFUL HINTS

WHAT TO BRING
 Good waterproofs! The climate of the Kerry Peninsula can be wet. Carry a supply of cash in euros, as cards are not accepted everywhere.

FOOTWEAR
 Underfoot surfaces on this hike include tarred roads, gravel paths, rocky paths, and muddy bog. Combined with the risk of wet weather, most hikers will be happy in hiking boots.

PLANNING AND NAVIGATION
 Although the trail is signposted, parts of it head into rough mountain terrain. Carry a guidebook, compass, and topographic maps (Distance Survey of Ireland's Discovery series, sheets 78, 80, and 84).

SUPPLIES
 There are food stores at Killarney, Glenties, Cahersiveen, Waterfalls, Cahernacree, Sneem, and Kenmare. Some accommodation providers offer light meals, but others, such as hostels, do not. B&Bs offer breakfast, but not evening meals. Between Killarney and Glenties you may need to carry food for two to three days.

WATER
 There is a lot of water in Ireland—streams, lakes, rivers—but the landscape is agricultural, so it isn't always safe to drink. Treat or filter water you top up from natural sources. You'll be able to fill bottles from your accommodations each day, and you can purchase bottled water at food shops.

BACKGROUND

STONE RING FORTS
 Stone ring forts can be found throughout the Ring of Kerry and Dingle Peninsula. Most were constructed between the Bronze Age and the early Christian era, and they vary in size, some were no more than fortified farmsteads, while others were huge, probably built by wealthy nobles, and would have housed several families. Thousands of ring forts survive, and they can be seen at several locations along the Kerry Way, notably the Lusher and Stapege stone forts. Legend has it that these ancient monuments were constructed by fairies. Disabling these sites is regarded as bad luck, so don't take any stones as a souvenir!

FLORA & FAUNA

CELTIC RAIN FOREST
 Although much of Ireland is now agricultural, fragments of ancient Celtic rain forest survive. On the Kerry Way, you'll hike through stands of ancient oak woodland. These are often relics of the vast wet forest that once blanketed the landscape in the millennia after the last ice age. Celtic rain forest harbors species such as variable oak, cherry, birch, mosses, liverworts, and lichens.

When you are leaving the comfort zone for an outdoor adventure the most incredible things can happen.

Leaving the Comfort Zone showcases what it's like to experience the full spectrum of life. From encountering different cultures to embracing the freedom of nature, this adventure ultimately takes you on a journey of exploration and self-discovery.

Filled with striking imagery and expert advice, this book provides valuable first-hand accounts and insights to plan your own expedition, from where to stay, what to eat, and who you might encounter along the way. From cycling, hiking, canoeing, skiing, and sailing, Belgian-Dutch couple Olivier Van Herck and Zoë Agasi take you on a 40,000 kilometer (25,000-mile) journey spanning four years across continents and several countries. Utilizing the power of the human body, the most incredible things can happen when you leave your comfort zone.

OLIVIER VAN HERCK and ZOË AGASI are a Belgian-Dutch couple who have spent four years traveling the world in six different travel methods. In 2016, they left inexperienced and for an indefinite period of time on two antique bicycles.

For the last 200 kilometers (124 miles) on skis, we follow the Kviteseid River (right). Sweden has hundreds of free cabins and shelters, such as this pilgrim's chapel near Mora, where anyone can enjoy the fjällstuga—open air life (bottom).

Open-Air Life

Scandinavia as Our Home Away from Home

Zoë's hair is washed and wet. The water in the lake is barely 1°C (34°F), but the day feels like a relief. There is nothing more refreshing than a cold dip after several long days of sports. She cracks her spine after every swim. When all eight garments are washed, Olivier wrings them out and hangs them over the electric line along between two trees. The wind and sun do the rest. Next to it is our temporary home, a beautiful wooden shelter, within which we have set up our tent. The shelter has three walls and opens at the front, is more than we need. We have just arrived and already feel completely at home.

We entered Sweden three days ago and the steep climb around the Norwegian fjords immediately gave way to a more rolling landscape, with more forests and lakes. We have been sleeping in the tent for 11 nights in a row, but the Swedes aren't surprised by that. We meet people everywhere in nature being active. People fish, hike, or frigate berries and mushrooms in the forest. Yesterday, we saw a family picnicking in the rain, and earlier, we saw people taking a morning swim in the cold lake. Suddenly, we are finally getting our comfort. It makes us happy. The Scandinavian people show us that it is possible to combine a love for the outdoors with everyday life. They all balance the responsibilities of jobs, houses, and families, yet they make enjoying the great outdoors a priority. Friluftsliv—open-air life—says it all.

In the forest, we collect dry wood for our campfire. Making the campfire is Zoë's job. Discarded, she arranges the twigs in piles from thin to thick. This is how she learned it, and this is how she always succeeds. Olivier stokes the wood from the freshly packed charcoal and fills a pan with water from the lake. The kitchen is his territory and his moment of rest after a day on the skis. The main course is pasta with cream, onions, and mushrooms. A loaf of bread is baked in a hot oven in our collapsible oven next to the fire. It is our dessert, along with the blueberries we receive from nature every day. We sit on the bench around the fire pit and watch the dancing flames. It is our ritual, but still, we sit close together. The only sound is the crackling of the pine. The water is a perfect mirror, and the fire warms our bodies in the sky.

Our childhood home will always be our home, but the outdoors is our home away from home. The outdoors are always in Sweden for us. They are in the air and in the people. During the day we coast the miles, but these evenings are what really make us enjoy life.

The last day

The skis plan that we made in Fort Kent was to board a freighter ship in Canada and sail to Germany. From there, we would sail through Scandinavia on the coast and in the Netherlands. Then, the ship would complete. Could mean the ship would not be completed but give us the freedom to leave for Scandinavia with no final destination. For a week, we receive a message from Walter, a colleague of Olivier's father's who has been following our journey since the start. He has an offer to make. "Our vacation home in Sweden is vacant so you can spend the winter there," Walter writes. We look at the map, see that we passed that region two weeks ago, turn around, and skate via a detour to our new destination.

"Last day," Olivier whispers as he gently wakes Zoë. The sun permeates the tent. A tractor hums in the distance, and an occasional car drives on the asphalt road in the distance. We have walked up to these mountains in the background for many miles. The walk of the most visible separates us from what is out there, but we can hear, feel, and smell it. It is as if we are there with just our feet, but for now, we enjoy the last morning in our portable home.

It takes so long to get there, people often say when they see us traveling. That's the idea. We want to travel slowly, to see and smell the environment, to notice details of the culture, and to work our muscles. We don't choose the fast lane but the path of adventure. There is no better way to discover a country than to travel through it slowly.

We cover the last few meters on foot. We don't do that to extend our last day, but out of necessity. Two days ago, a truck appeared in Olivier's vision, so we had been half walking, half bicycling, and half pushing the bike. No cranking, just hard work. That's how we did it and we're so happy to think that we did it.

That's why we are in the driveway of the vacation home. We have lived on the road for four years, but our life under wheels ends here. It was exactly four years ago on the 10th of September, 2016 that we got on our bikes in Assen at the beginning of our trip. It fits perfectly now. A day like this one.

Boat life, this is like vanlife on the water—explore the world across the great blue waters.

The lure of nomadic life on the water is simply too great for many to resist, offering the opportunity to discover an array of landscapes and cultures, and the freedom to sail wherever you like. Whether you are drawn to the Mediterranean, Caribbean, or Arctic, each maritime region has its own unique charm. Extraordinary experiences and adventures await you wherever you go.

These days, people are increasingly loath to be tied to living and working in one place. This has prompted some of them to swap the confines of their city apartments for the functional yet cozy quarters of a boat cabin. Boatlife is packed with striking photographs and inspiring stories. Take a deep dive into the boat-life mindset and rethink your whole notion of "home."

KATHARINA CHARPIAN is an explorer, entrepreneur, and journalist from Hamburg, Germany. In 2020, she embarked on a six-month sailing trip from Germany to Norway above the Arctic Circle. Today she lives and works on her monohull sailboat exploring the world with her boyfriend and terrier.

counteract that effect. We also drink fresh coconut water, which contains natural electrolytes," says Lily. Despite their isolation, the couple do sometimes meet like-minded sailors. On Lizard Island, they were delighted by the pristine natural beauty and by the sailing community they found there. With their newfound friends, they whittled away the days with sea chit, yoga, birdwatching, decluttering, hiking, and playing the guitar. They also learned how to surf with an e-fan (an electric board) and visited a research station on the island. "The island felt like a local school, with everyone sharing their favorite skills and pastimes," enthuses Lily.

These two boat-lifers usually spend six to eight months away from civilization at a time.

Such things come easily now, but making this their way of life was far from easy. For a long time, Lily and Hayden lacked the financial means to buy their own sailing yacht. They sailed away at night jobs and endured a great many hardships over the years in order to fulfill their dream. These days, their biggest challenges are the tropical storms, cyclones, and strong currents that sailors fear in this part of Down Under. On one occasion, while anchored in a lonely bay for the night, their vessel was caught in a sudden storm with winds of up to 70 knots (80 mph/130 kph). Within the space of a few minutes, Hayden had been gutted from its anchorage onto the sandy beach. It was a huge shock, but luckily the boat was unscathed. "The couple could not help but smile when they looked out from their unconventional berth to see a crowd of curious ghost crabs peering at them. The tide came in the next morning, carrying their 40ft (12 m) hull back out to sea.

As everyone is aware, the Great Barrier Reef is currently bleached by coral die-off due to climate change. Although the two Aussies have known about this since

ICELAND TRAVERSE ICELAND

GOOD TO KNOW
START/FINISH Hraunhafnartangi Lighthouse to Dyrhlaey Lighthouse

SEASON Mid-June to the end of September

ACCOMMODATIONS These hiking complete traverses will spend most of their nights wild camping. Alongside your evenings in a tent will possibly be the occasional stay in one of the route's backcountry huts (which are a godsend in stormy weather).

HIGHLIGHTS
1. Ashgry and Djúvalsgjúfur canyons
2. The waterfalls of Deifdals and Skógafoss
3. Lake Myvatn
4. Side trip to Akagi (see Bonus Track)
5. Óðalvarnir desert
6. Langvegur and Flinnuhálsur trails (p. 202)
7. Dyrhlaey promontory

HELPFUL HINTS

GETTING THERE & AWAY As of 2021, the easiest way to get to the northern terminus using public transportation is to take a bus from Reykjavik. From there, you can either try your luck hiking or organize a shuttle service to the lighthouse (Húsavík-based “Travel North” offers a shared service upon request). The southern terminus at Dyrhlaey Lighthouse lies 28 km (17.4 miles) from the last service town of Akagi (last service 2.7 mi from Route 1). You can either hitch, call a taxi, or walk (approx. 3.5–4 hours).

WHAT TO BRING Recommended items include a 50–55L backpack, sleeping bag rated to -5°C (23°F), well-insulated sleeping mat, three-season tent that holds up well in stormy conditions, trail running shoes or lightweight synthetic hiking boots, water bottles, first aid kit, lightweight potty toilet, sun protection (hat, glasses, sunscreen), compass and GPS app on your smartphone, over-ear maps of the route, headlamp, toiletries, power bank for charging electronics, Personal Locator Beacon, and trekking poles (optional). Recommended clothing includes a light to mid-weight fleece, down jacket, rain jacket, rain pants, beanie or buff, three pairs of socks (one pair clean for sleeping), hiking pants, head net, long-sleeved hiking shirt, fleece gloves or mittens, and medium-weight thermal underwear for sleeping.

REPLY Many hikers take a hybrid approach of buying along the way and sending resupply boxes. The easiest option for sending packages is via “Packlink Excursions” buses, which have a wide-ranging number of routes around the country (including the interior). From north to south, the main resupply options are as follows: Skopun (small grocery store), Ashgry (small resupply), Myvatn (large grocery store), Óðalvarnir (large grocery store), Myvatn (large grocery store), and Landmannalaugar (expensive snacks and basic supplies).

BONUS TRACK

AKAGI Among a myriad of possibilities, the Akagi Caldera is the one site that shouldn't be missed during the Iceland Traverse. For specific details on the area, see the Bonus Track (p. 165). For more on this hiker, perhaps the easiest way to access Akagi is via the marked route which leaves the F20 approximately 800m (0.5 miles) south of Dyrgilshá mountain hut (see Map). The out-and-back excursion measures 20km (12.4 miles) and takes an average of 10 to 12 hours to complete.

BACKGROUND

ICELAND'S SOUTHERMOST POINT The southern terminus of the Iceland Traverse is the lighthouse and promontory of Dyrhlaey. Located near the village of Akagi, up until 1928, Dyrhlaey was the southernmost point in the country. That changed after the Katla volcano erupted, forming the nearby Kilihlutangi (the Katla Spit), which extended more than a kilometer (0.6 miles) further south than Dyrhlaey. The spit is expected to return to Dyrhlaey in the not-too-distant future, as the sands of Kilihlutangi are rapidly being recaptured by the Atlantic Ocean, and at the time of writing, the spit is now only 200m (650ft) south of Dyrhlaey.

FLORA & FAUNA

WHY ARE THERE HARDLY ANY TREES IN ICELAND? Iceland's first forest settled at the end of the 9th century, approximately 20 percent of the country was covered in birchwood forests. Over the next three centuries, settlers cleared almost all of this woodland for agriculture, grazing, firewood, and construction. By the mid-20th century, the amount of forested land in Iceland was estimated to be less than 1 percent of the total area. This deforestation, combined with the layers of volcanic residue left by the island's many eruptions, has meant that much of Iceland's soil is of poor quality, doesn't hold moisture, and is prone to erosion. Despite these challenges, in recent decades, the national government has undertaken large-scale reforestation programs with the aim of achieving a 5 percent forest cover over the next 50 years.

Canary Islands, Spain

Located just over 62 miles (100 kilometers) off the west coast of Africa, the Canary Islands are ideally placed to receive powerful trade winds from the North Atlantic, which has led to an abundance of wind-swept beaches.

The most famous spots are at the village of La Graciosa, the southwestern corner of the island of El Hierro. In the north, the island of Tenerife is home to the world's largest volcanic crater, the Pico del Teide, which rises to a height of 12,198 feet (3,708 meters).

Could you live permanently on the road? When all your belongings fit in a few bags, your office is a roadside diner, and your home is a meandering route from Canada to the southern tip of Argentina?

In Two Years on a Bike, Martijn Doolaard puts it to the test. Strapping the necessities onto his bicycle, he ventures into desolate wastelands and sojourns in vast cities, exploring what it means to be at home in the world while embracing a life of minimalism and long-term travel. Along the winding roads of California's coasts, the impenetrable jungles of Mexico, the ever-higher passes of the Andes Mountains, and the severe alpine forests of Patagonia, Doolaard eschews comfort and convention for the sake of documenting life on one of the world's most breathtaking—and notorious—routes.

SAMPLE COVER

Cooking on an open fire is the most archaic of all cooking methods. This cookbook provides many varied recipes as well as practical tips.

For decades, open-fire cooking has been considered a pastime reserved for scouts and elite soldiers, leaving the rest of us to grill sausages on the terrace. But open-fire cooking is for everyone. It is sensuous and impractical in the best sense of the word. It is as much about the time spent making the food as it is about eating it.

Cooking on Fire is full of delicious fire-cooked recipes requiring varying degrees of effort. It teaches you how to build and light campfires, different campfire cooking techniques, the equipment you will need (if any), and everything else you need to know.

You'll find classic recipes like Chilli Con Carne and roasted chestnuts but also more challenging dishes that require a fair amount of time—which is a good thing. Because if there is one thing the authors would like to accomplish with this book, it is to give you, the reader, the freedom to sit down by the fire, and with food as the excuse, look into the flames, and relax.

WHAT TO EXPECT

- A cookbook for anyone who likes to spend long hours outside
- A great variety of recipes, tips on how to build the perfect fire, and which tools, and utensils to choose
- Lots of ideas, what you can cook over fires, besides steaks and delicious sausages

EVA H. TRAM worked as a gastronomical writer and editor for magazines and guides for several years before she almost accidentally picked up the camera and let her joy of food vitalise in photos as well. NICOLA TRAM worked as a chef in top restaurants in and out of Denmark before leaving the industry to be in television instead.

8 TYPES OF CAMPFIRES

LOG CABIN FIRE

An easy to make and highly flammable campfire that develops a good level of upward heat and produces large embers. The structure of the fire means that it is well-ventilated and the firewood constantly feeds the flames, so it requires minimal maintenance. Depending on how closely you pack the firewood, it will light up faster or slower. If you pack the wood loosely, you'll get a quick ignition but also a faster burnout. The log cabin fire is a very useful standard campfire (and my personal favorite) that provides a reliable ignition. It is a campfire that, once lit, will take care of itself without too much maintenance while the food is prepared. The vast majority of recipes in this book are made on a log cabin fire.

How to make it: Place three pieces of firewood in your tripod. Place the tinder between the pieces of wood and ignite. Add the kindling and start building the fire. First by laying three pieces of firewood across the three at the bottom. Then add a couple more layers placed perpendicularly to the previous ones, alternating in each new layer stacks over the one beneath.

RAKOVÁLEA FIRE

The Rakovalkea fire is an ancient Viking campfire that burns for a very long time. In the old days, a large trunk would be split and grilled, but that's a little overkill in my opinion, so this is my adaptation. The Rakovalkea fire is great for long-term cooking techniques that require the use of radiant heat, such as asado or rotisserie.

How to make it: Stack two or more pieces of firewood on top of each other like a sandwich and tuck some branches into the ground so that they stand vertically and hold the firewood in place. Place the tinder and kindling on a piece of bark so that you can move it once it has ignited. Light the tinder, place it between the pieces of firewood and feed it with the kindling. It may be a little difficult to make it catch at first, as ventilation is not always optimal. But be patient and use a fan or blow on it, and once it ignites, you'll be rewarded with an impressive fire that burns for a very long time.

TOMATOES WITH WOODRUFF

- Log cabin, lean-to, teepee or hunter's fire
- 5-6
- Coarse-mesh sieve
- Grill rack
- 2-4

Light your fire and let it burn to embers. Finely chop garlic and thyme and mix with olive oil. Toss with the cherry tomatoes. Put the cherry tomatoes into a sieve.

Put a fresh piece of firewood in the fire so it starts to smoke. Keep the sieve over the embers and smoke. Shake the sieve slightly until the skins of the tomatoes begin to burst. At this point, do not shake the sieve anymore but simply hold it over the smoke and embers until the tomatoes collapse slightly. This takes approx. 10 minutes. Then put the cherry tomatoes in a bowl and season with salt.

Place a grill rack approx. 15 cm / 6 in over the embers. Cut the beefsteak tomatoes in half and season the cut side with vinegar, sugar and a little salt. Grill them on the grill rack (cut side down) for 5 minutes until they have obtained quite a bit of color. Place the grilled beefsteak tomatoes on a platter with the cherry tomatoes. Garnish with fresh woodruff.

Provence is a feast for the senses that epitomises the French art of slow living. At the heart of it, there is always a table. In this book, cook Pauline Chardin shares over 50 of her delicious, healthy, and—best of all—easy recipes that are structured along the seasons. This is more than just a cookbook. With a keen sense for design, Chardin knows that the eye takes the first bite.

A Spoonful of Sun lavishes us with aesthetic pleasures too, taking us around the house Chardin designed for herself, into the irresistible surrounds of her Provençal home, and back to what matters most: the food on the table.

PAULINE CHARDIN is a French creative director, food expert, stylist, and photographer. Her work and lifestyle have been featured in publications such as Milk Magazine, AD, or Ignant. She lives in Provence, in a house she designed with her partner.

“After a life as a traveler on the sets of fashion and design, Pauline Chardin left Paris for a country house in the Provençal Drôme that she designed as an observatory, large panoramic windows all around, to enjoy, and capture, the changing lights and colors. For her first book, A Spoonful of Sun, she photographed and cooked for a whole year all the seasons. And, surprise!, she (re)discovered that there are far more than four.” ELLE weekly (Italy)
